Editorial

Welcome to the spring edition of the newsletter. This issue contains the full programme for the 2018 conference Textiles as Art; Textiles in Art, as well as the study day Learning through Reconstruction on 22nd September this year. Ticket sales have been going well, with more tickets sold for the conference than last year already. Don't forget to buy yours if you have not yet done so!

In February Medats members visited the Clothworkers Centre of the Victoria and Albert Museum. The day was a great success and a report, with photographs, will be included in the next newsletter. We have an exciting study day booked for 2019 in Norwich - please see page 5 for details, plus a call for assistance from Medats members. We are still looking into holding study days at The Mary Rose Museum and the Museum of Leathercraft in Northampton. Any other suggestions gratefully received.

Finally, we are still looking for ideas for how the Society might further promote itself and attract more members. We have, in fact, had quite a few new members join in the last year, quite possibly due to an increased online presence via our Facebook page and the new website, which is now live - huge thanks to Saragrace for all her hard work on this. If any members have ideas for promoting the society, or would be willing to take Medats leaflets to events they plan to attend, please let me know and I will post some out to you.

Could you join the committee?

After many years as MEDATS Treasurer and Membership secretary respectively, Mary Frost and Carole Thompson have expressed their wish to step down as soon as replacements can be found.

In addition Gale Owen-Crocker intends to step down as programme secretary after the 2018 conference. Please consider whether you might be able to take on any of these roles. The running of the society depends entirely on the generosity of members who volunteer their time as committee members.

Carole, Mary and Gale will be on hand to provide any help or guidance new volunteers may need to start.

A visit to Historiska Museet, the Swedish history museum in Stockholm

by Christine Carnie

In February I had the chance for a visit to the Swedish history museum and a “behind the scenes” peek at their textile department. My most favourite parts of the museum were the medieval art section, and the 14th and 15th century section of Sweden’s history, where you can see a replica of Queen Margareta’s golden gown (The cloth of gold original belongs to Uppsala Cathedral), and I found this wonderful velvet purse. Unfortunately my camera struggled with the low light and glass case. There were many more beautiful textile details to be found, especially in the section about St. Bridget.

For anyone interested in medieval armour the exhibition room about the Battle of Visby 1361 is a must. Since I was a bit short on time I had but a fleeting glance, but will return for a proper look next time I’m in Stockholm.

I gleaned many interesting clothing details from the altarpieces on show in the medieval art section. There are mainly altarpieces, painted or in relief, and a few statues and a couple of everyday items like a chest, or a bench. One section is set up like a medieval church or chapel, which puts the artwork back into its original context.

When studying religious figures for clothing details I find that it gets a bit tricky when you try to identify saints, especially when there are quite a few in the same altarpiece; with similar attributes, and no detailed description.

Something I had not come across before is that some saints were always depicted with red shoes, by different artists and across a century, which made me wonder if that was another message to the contemporary viewer, and I would love to know if anyone else has noticed that, and if they were able to identify the saints.

I had started my visit with a peek at the storage and study area of the textile department, and had been shown some amazing velvets and silks from church vestments. I loved that I was able to find similar shapes and designs in the artwork of the period. There were several beautiful depictions of velvets, I have added a detail photo of a bishop’s cloak from a Pieta altarpiece from the late 15th century, and the cloth of gold depiction on an extended holy family (both Mary and Anne are shown in cloth of gold gowns)

MEDATS Study Day with Norfolk museums service to include viewing the collection of early church textiles and a tour of Strangers Hall

CALL FOR ASSISTANCE

Norwich castle keep is undergoing redevelopment and the museum is seeking to apply for a conservation grant within the next 6 months to ensure that the early church textiles can be included in the new Medieval gallery. It could really help make the case for the significance of the textiles, and bolster a grant application, if the curators could get some informed eyes on the collection. Are there any members out there, with a knowledge of late medieval church textiles, who would be willing to travel to Norwich with Ninya Mikhaila (who is organising the February study day) and take a look? Please email Ninya at newsletter@medats.org.uk

SHOE BOOK REVIEWS BY JUNE SWANN

Wall Paintings of Eton

by E Howe, H McBurney, D Park, S Rickerby & L Shekede
Scala, 2012. £14.50. Hardback, 192 pages
ISBN 978-1-85759-787-5

In the early days of the Costume Society we visited Eton to see the 15th century wall-paintings, so I was pleased to see this book with many colour photographs. The condition of most of the paintings is, understandably, not the best. As usual, the shoes at the bottom have suffered rather more than the higher parts. In the Catalogue section from p.93 there are a few line drawings of the scenes showing barefoot, soled hose, shoes including toe-shapes, sole, and ankle, calf and knee-boots, for which I was very grateful. Part III from p.143 has similar descriptions of the early 16th century schoolboys in black, low cut, bar shoes.

The Annual Textile Art of Today - call for submissions

Triennial of Textile, without borders, the civic association proclaims the fifth year of the international art project Textile Art of Today 2018. Textile Art of Today is an international tour of contemporary professional textile art and its latest trends. It also includes a category of student's art works of art schools. The exhibition will present works that cross the boundaries of classic textiles and which are innovative. We will be working with modern technologies, such as linking mobile apps with art works. We would like to see art works that incorporate scents, light, shadow, kinetics, and other works that respond to the current themes of the global world. Of course there is also classic textile tapestry. At the exhibition, we welcome textile installations, objects, videos, works that are closer to sculptural but also jewellery creation.

The fourth annual of Textile Art of Today took place in 2015 until January 2017. 230 artists from 41 countries worldwide signed for the exhibition. The Curator's Committee selected 76 artists and students. Subsequently, the international jury awarded the Grand Prix of Bozena Augustinova, the 3 Excellence Awards, the Tatra Gallery Award, the Polish Cultural Institute Award and the Student Award. The show was extremely successful. It travelled through four Central European countries (Slovakia, Czech Republic, Poland and Hungary) and was visited by 40 000 visitors.

The fifth annual Textile Art of Today will take place on 7 of September 2018 at the Danubiana Meulensteen Art Museum in Bratislava, Slovakia. On this day the international jury will award the best art works. After the exhibition on 25 of November 2018 in Bratislava, the exhibition will be gradually reinstalled in: the Tatra Gallery in Poprad (SK), the Gallery of the Slovak Museum in Uherske Hradiste (CZ), the Pesti Vigadó Gallery Budapest (HU) and finally the Historical Museum in Bielsko-Biala (PL).

Please send the completed application form online at textileartoftoday@gmail.com, by April 16, 2018. Information about Textile Art of Today 2018 can be found on our website <http://textileartoftoday.com/en/> and Facebook page.

Weald & Downland Living Museum, Sussex DAY COURSES

Flax to Linen

16 June 2018 10am - 4pm

Learn the process of how our ancestors changed the flax plant into linen fabric. For millennia this basic but vital plant clothed us and became our second skin; come and be a traditional 'scutcher' or 'breaker' for the day and change this course fibre into a piece of linen string. Learn how to spin flax, perform a simple weave and care for your linens but most importantly, what to do with your left over 'tow'! Tickets cost £55

A history of knitting from the Tudor period onwards

Friday 28th September 10am - 4pm, repeated

Saturday 29 September 2018 10am - 4pm

A brief practical history of knitting in Britain, looking at the products, techniques, and social history of knitting and knitters from the 16th to the 20th century. Learn to 'knit in the round', use a knitting sheath, and try out a number of different techniques. Pictures, samples and items from the Knitting and Crochet Guild Collection illustrate the wealth of resources. Some previous knitting experience would be helpful on this course, but is not essential. Tickets cost £60 for each one day course. office@wealddown.co.uk 01243 811363

Winchester School of Art, University of Southampton

In the Loop at 10

19 - 20 July 2018

Keynote Speakers: Professor Jessica Hemmings, Professor Ingun Grimstad Klepp and Linda Newington, Founder of In the Loop

Call For Papers - Deadline 27 April 2018.

The sixth interdisciplinary and international In the Loop conference will be held at Winchester School of Art (WSA), University of Southampton 19-20 July 2018. This year marks the tenth anniversary of In the Loop and to celebrate this WSA will be hosting In the Loop at 10, a special conference which will celebrate the outstanding contribution that the conference, its organisers, and its participants have made to knitting scholarship, while also promoting new research on all aspects of knitting.

One of the major successes of Loop has been the development of a unique archive of knitting-related material at the University of Southampton, housed both in the Knitting Reference Library at WSA, and in the University's Special Collections. To help mark the significance of this legacy, we will particularly welcome papers this year on the theme of 'Collections'. We will interpret this theme broadly to include archives, libraries, private collections, company papers, personal documents, and knitwear design collections.

In addition, we are interested in receiving papers on any aspect of knitting, past, present, and future, and we look forward to hosting a conference that will bring together artists, designers, practitioners, knitters, academics, theorists, curators, archivists, and librarians. Abstracts should be no longer than 500 words and include full contact details and affiliation where appropriate. Send to J.A.Turney@soton.ac.uk
